

You receive a call from a patient who recently started taking a medication. The patient complains of experiencing severe allergic reactions, including difficulty breathing and rash. The patient wants to know what they should do.

